City Bloc Bouldering Wall,
Leeds - Under construction.

A large, angular wooden structure, likely a bouldering wall, is under construction in a workshop. The structure is composed of numerous light-colored wooden panels, possibly plywood, arranged in a complex, geometric pattern. The panels are joined together to form a series of interconnected, angular shapes. The structure is set against a backdrop of a workshop with a concrete floor and a ceiling with exposed pipes and a single bright light fixture. In the foreground, there is a workbench with various tools and materials, including a Bosch miter saw, a ladder, and several bottles. The overall scene is one of active construction and craftsmanship.
